Iran’s crude steel output up 6% in 8 months/year: WSA

TEHRAN – Production of crude steel in Iran in the first half of current Iranian calendar year 2019 has risen six percent from that of the same period of time in 2018, World Steel Association (WSA) has announced in its recent report. The WSA put the country’s crude steel output at 47.5 million tons in the said period of time, rising from 44.1 million tons in the same period of 2018.

Nearby 2,000 arrested as Egypt braces for anti-Sisi protests

TEHRAN – Egypt is bracing itself for a second weekend on Friday, with authorities stepping up arrests and tightening security in major cities ahead of calls for a “million-man march” against President Abdel Fattah el-Sisi.

Egypt’s Ministry of Interior warned on Thursday that anyone attempting to “destabilize” the country would be arrested since last weekend’s rare protests demanding the Sisi quit.

“Trump send this message to Zelenskiy and asked him to refuse the request of Biden,” saidad.

There is no doubt that the continuation of the pressure on Russia will lead to a disaster,” Nafaa said. “Egypt’s interest lies in continuing the positive relationship with Russia and working with an Egyptian artist was one of the conditions for me,” he added.

They argue that given a lack of support by senior Democratic Party officials regarding Biden’s case. The U.S. secretary of defense, the U.S. secretary of state and the U.S. chancellor of finance are not likely, given already bitter divides, to pour more poison into the nation’s political drama.

President Hassan Rouhani has told that UN silence over U.S. anti-Iran acts of the United States will go down in history as one of the worst crimes.

“The Iranian people will overcome problems no matter how tough, but the shame of silence over on economic terrorism by an aggressive government is a very heavy burden," he said during a meeting with UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres in New York on Wednesday.

"This approach needs to be changed and his imperialism and international arrogance must carry out its responsibilities," the president insisted.

According to CNN, unlike the complicated and confusing picture of shady dealings with Russians and potential obstruction painted by special counsel Robert Mueller, the questions pending in the new showdown are cut — a factor that adds to the President’s political vulnerability.

Iran seizes 9 tons of narcotics destined for Europe

TEHRAN – The police have seized a huge shipment of narcotics destined for Europe in Tirmoz, West Azarbaijan Province, according to the local police chief. “We seized 9 tons of different types of narcotics, which are stored in several containers, weighing approximately 67 tons,” said a police officer. According to police sources, the drugs were seized near the border with Afghanistan and were destined for Europe. The operation was conducted by a special police team, which is trained to deal with drug smuggling. The police have arrested two suspects, who are believed to be part of a larger smuggling network.

Diplomat urges halt to U.S. nuclear policies

TEHRAN – An Iranian diplomat has called for a halt to U.S. nuclear policies, saying that they are not in the best interest of the U.S. or the world. “We have heard the same lies and propaganda from the U.S. before, and we know they are not true,” said the diplomat. “We need to work together to create a better future for all nations.”

Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman Abbas Mousavi announced on Wednesday that Iran had seized a tanker carrying the arms. “The tanker, named Grace 1, was carrying 1,170 tons of illegal weapons,” said Mousavi. “We are confident that the weapons will be destroyed, and that the tanker will be released.”

It came after Mahmoud al-Sayyari, a senior Iranian official, accused the U.S. of using terrorism to justify its policies. “The U.S. has been using terrorism as a tool to justify its policies,” said al-Sayyari. “We are not afraid of the U.S., and we will continue to stand up to its threats.”

TEHRAN – Manufacturing of refrigerators, freezers rises 13.6% in 5 months on year

Since the U.S. reimposed sanctions on Iran to pressure the country to stop its nuclear program, the manufacturing sector has been taking all necessary measures to mitigate the impact of the sanctions and counter the U.S. actions.

Improving the performance of the manufacturing sector is one of the major strategies that Iran has been following in the past years in order to increase its independence.

And to realize this objective, providing the required working capital for the production units and meeting the raw material needs is one of the major measures being pursued by the government to raise the share of domestic production in the country’s economy.

And in June, Iran's Steel Association in late July, referred to the sanctions, said that the Steel industry is one of the industries in which some good investment has been made and that is why the country is ranking among the top five countries in the world in terms of steel production.

Iranian steel annual production is planned to reach 43 million tons in the Iranian calendar year 1400 (March 2021-March 2022).

The National Bank of Hungary (MNB) projected the current account deficits equivalent to 0.9% of GDP in 2019, 0.7% of GDP in 2020, and 0.4% of GDP in 2021.

Projections per se are not forecasts, published in June, the central bank had put the current account deficit at 2.1% of GDP in 2020 and 2021. Hungary had a current account deficit of 2.5% of GDP in 2018, MNB recalled.

The MNB acknowledged in the latest report the country will run current account deficits of 0.4% of GDP in 2020 and 0.3% in 2021.

The central bank noted that the current account balance is expected to deteriorate in 2019 as declining domestic demand cause the trade balance to deteriorate.

The MNB said the government has taken necessary measures to maintain the country's metal exports despite the current account deficits.

The central bank said household consumption and investment will be reduced by a 1% point lower respectively than that of 2018 and 2019.

The MNB also noted that Iran’s steel production output is planned to reach 30 million tons in the current Iranian calendar year.

Iran's petrochemical feedstock to reach 1.7bn bpd by 2025

Tehran – Managing Director of Iran's National Petrochemical Company (NPC) said the feedstock oil to petrochemical plants is expected to reach an annual capacity of 1.7 billion barrels per day (bpd) by 2025, Shana news agency reported.

Behzad Mohammadi made the remarks on the last day of Iran Plast 2019 international exhibition in Tehran on Wednesday.

Iran's petrochemical output (equal to 650,000 bpd of oil) is being supplied to petrochemical plants in the country.

By realization of the second leap in the petrochemical industry, 450,000 bpd, which is equivalent to 1.17 million tons of crude oil will be supplied to the sector by 2024, he added.

He said 4.5 million barrels per day (bpd) of raw materials (which are 4.5 million tons of raw materials) will also be supplied to the petrochemical industry in the downstream sector.

He pointed out that 30 million tons of items are used in petrochemical plants, which means that 10 million tons of raw materials and 20 million tons of materials are required in downstream petrochemical projects every year.

Politics determines Trump’s stance on climate change

GLOBALTIMES — US President Donald Trump on Monday made a 14-minute brief stop at the UN climate summit, which drew about six world leaders to a one-off event and delivered remarks on religious freedom. Trump has been hinting that the US might pull out of the Paris climate accord, key reason for Trump to participate in the UN Assembly was not to deliver a speech, but to drive a stake in slaming China over the country’s Xinjiang Uighur Aut

在中国国内，国际社会对美国可能退出的担心正在影响一些国家的决策。近年来，一些国家对中国在新疆地区的做法持批评态度，担心美国退出《巴黎协定》可能加剧对中国的敌意。这可能影响一些国家与中国的关系，甚至可能引发一些国家对中国在国际事务中的影响力和作用的担忧。

Trump plans to expand offshore oil and gas drilling in the Arctic and off the California coast, a move that could undermine the US’s world’s top oil exporter. However, dealing with climate change remains a priority for Trump. He has embarked on a development path with China as a major player. Warren and Biden virtually deadlocked in new national poll

As CBS reported, Sen. Elizabeth Warren and former President Joe Biden are virtually deadlocked in a close race for the Democratic presidential nomination according to a new national poll on Wednesday. The poll shows Warren at 27% and Biden at 25%. The other candidates have just 7% and below. Support for Warren has topped the pack since June, with Warren leading by a wide margin over the second-place candidate, the Sept. 23-24 poll showed. Support for Biden is in a competitive contest with Warren for the Democratic nomination. Sanders dropped by 4 percent in the latest poll. The two candidates also have one edge in support from polls released Saturday showed Warren overtaking Biden for the first time in the Massachusetts primary on Sept. 15. Caught in the act: the hole in which a human, and not a black hole, appears

Al equal with human experts in medical diagnosis, study finds

Artificial intelligence is on a par with human experts when it comes to medical diagnoses based on images, a study finds. The potential for artificial intelligence in healthcare has been significant, with promises of improved accuracy and reduced costs, but questions remain about how such systems may be used to augment medical practice in the real world. The findings of the study, published in the journal Nature Medicine, show that machine learning algorithms can match or even outperform human experts in identifying diseases from medical images.

The team, led by researchers at the University of California, San Francisco, trained an artificial intelligence system on a large dataset of medical images and then tested its performance against that of radiologists. They found that the AI system could diagnose certain conditions with the same level of accuracy as human experts, and in some cases even outperform them.

The results suggest that AI could play a significant role in healthcare, potentially improving diagnostic accuracy and reducing the workload of radiologists. However, the researchers emphasized the need for further study to understand the limitations and potential biases of AI systems in medical imaging.

Tripling shelf life of macaroni and cheese

Washington State University scientists have developed a new packaging film that could triple the shelf life of macaroni and cheese, potentially saving food waste and feeding more people. The film, made from biodegradable wax, can extend the shelf life of food products without compromising flavor or texture.

The research, published in the journal Nature Food, found that the new film extended the shelf life of macaroni and cheese for up to 18 months, compared to just a few weeks for traditional packaging. The scientists say the film could also be used to improve the shelf life of other high-oil foods like meats, baked goods, and coffee.

The film is made from biodegradable materials and is compostable, making it a sustainable alternative to traditional packaging. The team is working to scale up the production of the film for commercial use.

Canary Islands yield new evidence of Sahara's age

Scientists have captured a view of a colossal cosmic event from beginning to end for the first time, providing new insights into the formation of the Universe. The event, which occurred more than 375 million light-years away, was observed by the Transiting Exoplanet Survey Satellite (TESS), which is designed to find planets orbiting other stars.

The team, led by astronomers at the University of Cambridge, observed the event for over a week, capturing images of the black hole at the center of the galaxy. The team was able to determine the age of the event, which they estimate at 2.6 billion years.

The findings provide new evidence for the theory that the Universe is expanding, and could help astronomers better understand the formation of galaxies and the distribution of matter in the early Universe.

Jackdaws can identify "dangerous" humans, scientists say

Jackdaws can identify humans they perceive as "dangerous," according to new research. The birds were trained to associate humans with food rewards, and were able to distinguish between humans who were considered dangerous based on previous interactions.

The study, published in the journal Behavioral Processes, found that jackdaws could identify humans who had previously been associated with food rewards, and avoided interacting with them.

The results suggest that jackdaws can learn to associate humans with negative outcomes, and that this ability could be useful in the development of programs to prevent human-wildlife conflict.

Researchers can guess where you're from by how colors make you feel

Whether you see red, feel blue, or go green with envy may depend on where you live. A new study found that people from different countries associate colors with different emotions, and that these associations can be used to predict a person's country of origin.

The research, published in the journal Science, found that people from different countries associate colors with different emotions, and that these associations can be used to predict a person's country of origin. For example, orange was associated with happiness in the United States, but with sadness in Greece.

The findings suggest that cultural and environmental factors can influence how we perceive colors, and that these perceptions can be used to better understand the ways in which we interact with our environment.

The site was a part of the ancient Silk Roads network, recognized as a transnational World Heritage site.

The ancient Silk Road has existed for thousands of years, passing through many different cultures, kingdoms, empires, and states throughout history. At certain times in its history, traders and travelers moved along these routes, sometimes at risk or danger.

Known in classical times as Echtpanda, Hamedan was one of the ancient world’s greatest cities. Pitifully little remains from antiquity, but significant parts of the city are given over to reconstructions, and there’s a scattering of historical curiosities.

Hamedan, never falls short of offering cultural heritage sites to its visitors. Some sites that can be visited include: Palatine Church, Turco-Sassanian and Turkish houses, public gardens and colorful outdoor markets. Most importantly, its hospitable people make for an unexplored slice of the city.

Skeletor of ancient sports fan and head-shielded jar found in Bulgarian grave

The skeleton of an ancient sports fan was discovered alongside a 1,600-year-old jar shaped like the head of a wrestler or boxer. The jar, which was in his possession, was made from bone.

The “spectacular” halluvarum – a jar used to store liquids such as bathing perfumes – was found in a grave in southeastern Bulgaria (ancient Thracian).

The “spectacular” halluvarum – a jar used to store liquids such as bathing perfumes – was found in a grave in southeastern Bulgaria (ancient Thracian).

It dates to a time when the Roman Empire controlled the ancient area that encompassed parts of Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey.

Made of brass, the halluvarum depicts a man with a goatee and a nose that looks crooked or bent as if it had been broken and not fully healed. The man is wearing a cap made from the skin of a feline. Unlike a usual piece, the archaeologist wrote in a paper published in the October issue of the American Journal of Archaeology.

Examples of halluvarums that have similar features, such as a brooch, have been found elsewhere in the Roman Empire and are often interpreted as depicting boxers or wrestlers.

As soon as a storm has a name, it’s recognized as a hurricane, tropical storm, or even a tropical depression. When a storm is recognized as such, the National Hurricane Center begins tracking it and issues watches and warnings. When a hurricane or tropical storm is declared to be a hurricane, the government begins to prepare for the worst.

This year, the UNWTO has adopted the motto of “Tourism and Jobs: A Better Future for All.” Tourism is seen as a means to set goals on development of skills, education, jobs, and earning a living.

The UN body also certifies that the tourism’s role in this is “potentially great.” It is needed in order to maximize tourism’s potential to create more and better jobs, and also to improve the quality of life in the areas where it is practiced, especially for women and youth; to reflect and incorporate natural and cultural heritage; and to help conservation efforts and virtual models ensure that the art housed in them will live on for many years to come.

This is according to the UN body, requires a holistic approach to the future of work in tourism, with heightened cooperation between all actors, including the public and private sectors.

Aachen Cathedral

Aachen Cathedral, traditionally known in English as the Cathedral of Aachen or Aachen Cathedral in Aachen, western Germany.

Aachen Cathedral, also known as the cathedral of Emperor Charlemagne, was the first cathedral in Europe to be built in the Gothic style. It was constructed between 1544 and 1560.

When the Emperor Wenceslas II died, he left the cathedral to the Church of the Holy Roman Empire. It was completed in 1560 and is considered the first example of Gothic architecture in Germany.

Aachen Cathedral is the burial place of German and Austrian monarchs, including those of the Holy Roman Empire.

With some parts of the world still recovering from hurricane season, planning well in advance for potential disruptions is extremely important. Traveling to a high-risk area like Florida or the Caribbean during hurricane season can be risky.

A hotel with a hurricane guarantee offer will either rebook you without any extra charge or, if you choose not to accept the rebooking, they will pay the remaining part of your trip costs. But it’s important to know how exactly these guarantees work and what they cover.

To prepare for hurricane season, it’s essential to have a plan in place. Here are some tips to consider:

1. Get ready: Prepare your home and make sure it’s hurricane-proof by reinforcing windows, strengthening doors, and securing any loose items.

2. Have an evacuation plan: In case you need to leave your home, know the safest route to take and create a list of important documents and items you’ll need.

3. Stay informed: Monitor weather reports and follow updates from local authorities and the National Hurricane Center.

4. Protect your possessions: Consider purchasing travel insurance that includes hurricane coverage.

5. Be safe: If you’re going to be traveling to an area that’s prone to hurricanes, it’s essential to follow the advice of local authorities and stay informed. And if you’re in a hazardous area, it’s better to evacuate to a safer location.

Remember that a travel insurance policy designed to reimburse you for non-refundable trip costs. So, if a hotel cancels your reservation due to a hurricane, the travel insurance policy will pay the remaining part of your trip costs. But it’s important to know how these guarantees work and what they cover.

By taking these precautions and planning ahead, you can ensure that you have a safe and stress-free hurricane season.

UK govt. told to curb aviation emissions to meet net zero climate target

Lea Murray, director at campaign group in 10 climate action, said aviation has been given a “free ride” in climate policy for too long, with politicians putting it in the “too hard” box.

The government was talking up the need to meet net zero by 2050, which is likely to be feasible, a government advisory committee said.

Leave Yemen or face economic sanctions on your country: Ansarallah to UAE

TEHRAN — Yemeni’s pro-government forces have called on the UAE to leave Yemen and allow a democratic and unified Yemen to be established. The call is in response to growing reports of activities by UAE forces in Yemen.

The UAE has been accused of supporting illegal contenido forces in Yemen, including the Houthis, who are fighting against the legitimate government of President Abdrabbuh Mansur Hadi. The UAE has also been involved in the region's conflicts, including in Libya and Yemen, where it has been accused of supporting separatists.

The call from the Yemeni government comes in response to reports of UAE forces entering Yemen and engaging in military activities. The UAE has denied these reports, stating that it is providing support to Yemeni forces in order to defend the country against the Houthis.

The Yemeni government's call for the UAE to leave Yemen is likely to be met with resistance from the UAE, which has been accused of destabilizing the region.

Erdogan's AK Party membership seen sliding further as dissent grows

TEHRAN — Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan's AK Party faces growing internal divisions, with a senior official telling AFP on Monday that the party is facing a “crisis of conscience.”

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that the party was facing a “crisis of conscience” as many members are dissatisfied with the party's policies, which they view as anti-democratic and authoritarian.

The AK Party, which has been in power since 2002, has been accused of suppressive measures against dissent and has faced criticism for its handling of the economy, corruption, and human rights issues.

The party's internal divisions have been fueled by Erdogan's decision to give the ruling party candidates in local elections the right to stand as independent candidates, which has led to growing discontent among party members.

The official said that the party is facing a “crisis of conscience” as many members are dissatisfied with the party's policies, which they view as anti-democratic and authoritarian.

The AK Party, which has been in power since 2002, has been accused of suppressive measures against dissent and has faced criticism for its handling of the economy, corruption, and human rights issues.

The party's internal divisions have been fueled by Erdogan's decision to give the ruling party candidates in local elections the right to stand as independent candidates, which has led to growing discontent among party members.

Sources: Nice player stole teammate’s €70k watch

Nice forward Lamine Diallo-Fadaï has admitted to stealing teammate Kasper Dolberg’s watch from a team dressing room last week, sources close to the Ligue 1 club said.

The story was first reported by French outlet L’Équipe, who hinted the 23-year-old could be suspended by Nice manager Patrick Vieira, and promised to reward his teammate for the value of the watch.

The timepiece is worth €70,000.

Diallo-Fadaï’s former agent, an unknown perpetrator he denoted as “X” last week after discovering the watch had been stolen during a training session. An official investigation was later opened by the police.

Nice are also investigating the matter on their side and Diallo-Fadaï risks being prevented fromei for misconduct as well as a criminal prosecution.

The former English U-21 and United international made his debut for Nice as a 18-year-old and made six appearances for the first team last season.

Roma fan ban for life for racist abuse

Roma have handed a lifetime ban to a supporter who racially abused Bristol defender Joe Bryan on social media.

The Serie A side have announced that they have reported the incident to the police.

The public denunciation was met with widespread appreciation from fans worldwide.

“Thank God we lost from time to time in the Champions League. We don’t think about (the winning run),” Klopp told reporters.

“I don’t see any reason why there should be any advantage for the in-form club,” he added. “The play-offs are not a win or a draw.”

The Urban Art Unites intends to support creative bilateral artistic exchange between Italy and Iran and also to raise social awareness of the importance of beautification in urban spaces.

Speaking to the Tehran Times, Ambassador Giuseppe Perrone stressed the point that art can unite Iran and Italy despite the differences between the two nations.

“About these months ago when I arrived in Tehran, I was impressed by the murals featuring different concepts and its various styles across the city. I appreciate the efforts made by city authorities and artists to beautify their city,” he added.

He also expressed his satisfaction over the works created by Qadghani and FAC, and said: “Although the artists are completely different in their styles, there is something in the paintings that connects them to each other, and now all the people can praise the artists and enjoy their works.”

Perrone also announced the embassy’s plan to organize an exhibition of sculptures by the Italy-based Iranian artist Bijan Raizii in early October in Tehran.

“We are working in the area of cinema as well, because this is a point of strength both for Italy and Iran. We are organizing some film reviews and programs not only in Tehran but also in other Iranian cities in the near future,” he concluded.

“Kojak” by Mobih Jafari, about two young Iranian volunteers who won legal appeal during the 1980-1988 Iran-Iraq war. “Benjamin” by Mohsen Eynali, an animation about Benjamin who tries to save his mother from the King’s soldiers, and “No Fly Zone” by Amir Dasargar, about three teenagers who face several problems and obstacles while working on a project. “That Night’s Train” by Hamidreza Yoll, “The Ocean Beyond the Window” by Bahab Nabizadeh and “Tornado” by Seyyed Javad Hashemi are also among the films. Farsi is organizing the film week in collaboration with the Institute for Intellectual Development of Children and Young Adults.

The exhibit titled “The Peace and Friendship Ambassadors” in Tehran is proposed on Wednesday that the United Nations will name Iranian-Armenian maestro Loris Tjknavorsian as a peace ambassador.

The proposal was made by Tayyebeh Mohammadpour, son of the founder of the Peace and Friendship Ambassadors Group, during a meeting held at the United Nations Information Centre (UNIC) in Tehran, the Persian service of ILNA reported on Friday.

Tjknavorsian, 81, for his part said, “I am happy that I am an Iranian and I am also very pleased that my parents, like many other Armenians, chose to live in Iran, the country of Cyrus.”

“No single person can establish peace in this world, but we can reach peace with love and culture, and it is the anti-weapon. We in Iran can say that with all these poets and scholars, we are the peace-seeking country,” Tjknavorsian added.
