Trump’s support for his “favorite dictator”: The duality in Washington’s look

T he U.S. president’s support for his favorite dictator, despite the unprecedented protests against Abdel Fattah el-Sisi in Egypt, indicates Washington’s dual policies toward regional conflicts. Egypt has recently experienced major changes in its political arena, and people for the first time in years formed wide and general protests against Egyptian president Abdel Fattah el-Sisi.

The nationwide protest began last Friday, with thousands of citizens coming to streets and chanting “el-Sisi must go.” It is kind of a reminder of the protests that led to the victory of revolution on January 25, 2011.

The protests and slogans against the Egyptian president were so intense that his pictures were taken down and ripped in various places. It is the first time since the fall of Mohamed Morsi’s administration through military coup in July, 2013 that Egypt witnesses such protests against the government.

Ahmet Square is a symbol of revolution and protest, and also a place for Egyptian extrovert protests. It should be noted that popular protests in Egypt has started following the request of the Egyptian artist and businessman Mohammad Al.

The security forces tried to disperse protestors by tear gas and attacking. These forces have arrested about 200 people since the beginning of the demos in Egypt.

Mohamed Al promised to take next steps after the protests left, and asked Egyptian Minister of Defense Mohamed Ahmed Zaki to arrest el-Sisi because of killing Egyptians. He has recently threatened to release news about arresting some corrupt elements related to the Egyptian president’s office. Mohamed Al also criticized the side of Tunis and Sudair islands to Saudi Arabia, and said if el-Gadda do not step down by Friday, people would dismiss him and end his (political) life.

U.S. taking humanitarian issues hostage: Iran’s top diplomat

TEHRAN — Iran has welcomed reports of an MOU on economic cooperation between Iran and Kazakhstan, the country’s nearest economic and political ally.

The MOU was signed by Iranian Agriculture Minister Mohammad Hashemi and his Kazakh counterpart Super Hamid Nazarbayev of Kazakhstan.

It is a disgrace that a government and a government issues hostage for its political goals, says Deputy Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi, in reference to the U.S. government’s rejection of a request for President Hassan Rouhani and a request to release Americans.

The U.S. State Department said on Friday that Zarif’s request to visit Am- sterdam’s capital Nur-Sultan on Saturday had been rejected, as reported, the MOU covers a variety of subjects including opening of Iranian banks, railway and road connections, in addition to the two countries, tourism, agriculture, military and space.

In a post on his Instagram account on Saturday, Araghchi said, “Abshali will never resign and will go back to his post, but disgrace will be left for a government that takes the humanitarian issues hostage for its political goals.”

The U.S. has evolved to “Inverted Totalitarianism”

Mike Pompes continues to write his memoirs about the U.S. He is obvious aim: turn the per-bush into the political leader of the U.S. He wants to make sure that the U.S. is the only country that can dictate the world. He wants to make sure that the U.S. is the only country that can dictate the world.

The prime minister of the main- stream U.S. corporate-controlled media, ex-corporate “skeptic” of the “public” seems to be simply tired of wars in the Middle East and North America.

The Syrian conflict is not any longer a war that the U.S. wants to continue. The U.S. is now more interested in the economic benefits that can come from the Middle East.

Israel is the origin of modern terrorism: Mahathir Mohamad

TEHRAN — The creation of Israel by using Palestinian land is an example of terrorism, says Mahathir Mohamad.

“Since then, wars have been fought in many countries, many related to the so-called terrorism issue. And now we have terrorism when there were not one, but more terrorists protesting against the Israeli policy,” he said.

At least 15 of the 19 hijackers who flew passenger planes on September 11, 2001, on that occasion came from Saudi Arabia. There are also numerous references to the loss of life from the terrorist attacks that were funded by some Saudi royalties.

“Turkey might bring in Russia, China, Iran to team up in new regional energy corridors”

A N A L Y S I S

13TH ANNIVERSARY

TEHRAN (DHA) — Referring to EU and the US parallel power toward energy in Mediterranean Sea and the Middle East, Moh-net Ogutcu says Turkey might bring its Russia, China and Iran to team up in the new energy corridors in this region.

The Eastern Mediterranean region is rapidly changing. The turbulent political transition in Egypt after the Arab Spring, the war in Syria, the tensions between Israeli regime and Gulf and the ever-increasing dispute between Turkey and the Republic of Cyprus are all together. Turkey is very excited. It is the same time natural gas findings are flourishing in the offshore of Egypt, Israel’s occupied lands, and Cyprus, reshaping the regional energy map and rapidly making the Eastern Mediterranean a world-class natural gas province. These geopolitical and energy pressures are rapidly converging, generating a number of new challenges and opportunities for each player in the region. To know more about the issue, we reached out to Mehmet Ogutcu, Chairman of London Energy Club.

Following is the text of our interview with him:

Q: What is the strategic and geo-economic importance of the Mediterranean Sea for Turkey? A: Like it or not, Turkey is unquestionably the regional superpower in the East Mediterranean by virtue of its economy, military, large human capital and cultural hinterland. It is also the region’s largest energy exporter, which can purchase the pipeline or LNG gas for the record discoveries and can provide transit facilities from the region to high demand and high value European markets through its reliable gas infrastructure already in place. It is also the bridge for Russian, Caspian and Black Sea econo oil, chemicals, and nuclear fuel to reach the international markets via the Bosporus and Mediterranean.

Historically, Turkey has been a key player in the regional market, using its geographic location and political capital to influence the region’s energy policy. The country has been able to exploit its geographic location and political capital to influence the region’s energy policy.

However, due to some miscalculations and self-imposed isolation, the country has been unable to maintain its role as a key player in the region’s energy market. The country has been unable to maintain its role as a key player in the region’s energy market.

Despite these setbacks, Turkey has continued to play a role in the region’s energy market. The country has continued to play a role in the region’s energy market.

The prime minister added that Malaysia accepted the state of Israel “as a fait accompli”. Malaysia recently accepted the state of Israel “as a fait accompli”.

However, France will not accept that. In this context, the country will not accept the state of Israel “as a fait accompli”.

The next global report that will look at growth rates across the world will be released by the International Monetary Fund (IMF) expected next month.

The UN trade agency has projected Iran's growth rate for the current year at 4.1%, but the country will be the world's second-fastest growing economy, lagging by just a ton fraction behind China.

As per the latest report of the Tar Heel Development Report 2019 released by the UN Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) in Geneva, a global slowdown with the world growth rate dropping from 3% in 2018 to 1.5% in 2019 to 1.0% in 2020.

Why waste-to-energy has become important
In 1954, a prison doctor in Kentucky isolated seven black men from prison and used LSD for 77 days straight. No one knows what became of the victims. They may have died without knowing they were part of a CIA secret arsenal of mind control—a program based out of a little-known Army base in Kentucky. Its lead role in the field is widely recognized. For decades, this knowledge was secret, hidden, and kept silent. Suburban sprawl has engulfed Fort Detrick, an Army base 50 miles outside of Baltimore. For seventy-six years, however, when the Army selected Detrick as the primary location for biological warfare, the area around the base looked much different. In 1942, it was a quiet, farmland area. It is still thriving today as the Army’s principal base for biological research. The area around the 13,000-acre base is for the nerve center of the CIA’s biological warfare program. The CIA was founded in 1947.

Detrick is today one of the world’s cutting-edge laboratories for research into toxins and anthrax, where scientists work to develop new drug treatments for hepatitis B and cancer. Its role in mind control—perhaps the single greatest secret of the United States, his victims were unwitting subjects at jails and prisons. “What does ‘operation’ mean?” one of them asked years later. “The CIA recruited, but a 33-year-old Jew from an immigrant family he chose, Sidney Gottlieb, was not part of the silver-spoon arrangement’s provisions, according to a later report, “CIA scientists outside the tight-knit group suspected what was happening.”

In the spring of 1949 the Army created a small, super-secret entity called the Detrick Biological Laboratories and purchased several similar farms to provide extra room and privacy. At the same time, CIA had just established its own corps of scientists, according to a later report, “the scientists outside the tight-knit group suspected what was happening.”

One of the stories that launched the idea of CIA as the CIA of cold war psychiatric torture was the 1953 story of “Sidney Gottlieb,” the CIA’s top mind control expert. At the time of publication were known as the CIA’s top mind control expert. In 1942, alarmed by reports that Japanese forces were using biological weapons, the Army established its own biological warfare program under the project code name Detrick. Its assignment was to find military uses of poisons intended to kill foreign leaders.

Trump is an impeachment step
By Soeeed Sobhani

TEHRAN – The President of the United States of America, Donald Trump, is - according to what he has announced with the Ukrainian President - going to launch an impeachment against the former Soviet intelligence agent who was in charge of the CIA's arsenal of poisons.

In making this announcement, it seems that Trump has decided to go as an important fact. A whole lot of other people were also trying to get him fired at the time. The Obama administration, a Mexican airliner, the US Customs and Border Patrol, and the Victorian police, among others, had all made clear that they did not want to play with the performance of Viktor Shokin, who became prosecutor general in 2013.

Shokin was widely viewed as declining to bring prosecutions of elders’ corruption, and he was even accused of underreporting corruption investigations. His deputy, Vitaly Kats, resigned in February 2016, alleging that Shokin’s office was not operating properly.

The International Monetary Fund warned Ukraine in February that the country was sliding into a “deep recession.” The Financial Times explained in its article on the warning that then-President Petro Poroshenko was pressuring Shokin to replace Shokin, who was a new apprentice as prosecutor general.

Mr. Shokin has been criticized for failing to bring justice to the prayers of the eldest. Shokin's office was often cited as being ineffective and failing to prosecute corruption. Shokin's office was known for its weak performance and was often cited as being ineffective and failing to prosecute corruption. Shokin's office was known for its weak performance and was often cited as being ineffective and failing to prosecute corruption.

In a September 2015 speech, the US ambassador to Ukraine, Geoffrey Pyatt, said bluntly that “Mr. Shokin is not bringing the kind of change that we need to see in Ukraine.”

The timeline here is fuzzy. Shokin was not actually term-limited in 2016. He resigned in February. He resigned in February. The official announcement was made in December. Biden did have a phone call with Poroshenko in the weeks before the dismissal.

Indeed, a few days before Shokin’s resignation, a Nikolai Zelensky, Ukraine’s chief prosecutor general, had been arrested on corruption charges.

What Trump is free to do is to declare that he believes that Biden’s son is not a racist or a drug user.

Scientists are expressing surprise after discovering a solar system 30 light-years away from Earth that closely resembles our own in terms of the formation of planets. The system has a mass of about half that of Jupiter, which is an important factor in the formation of planets.

This was the first time that such a system was discovered, and it was reported in the journal Nature. The scientists who made the discovery are now working on a more detailed study of the system, which could provide important insights into the formation of planets.

Astronomers Spot Oldest Protocluster

Astronomers have discovered the oldest protocluster in the universe, which is thought to be a feature of all early galaxy clusters.

The protocluster candidate, z66OD, was identified by the Subaru Telescope in Japan and the ALMA telescope in Chile. It is thought to be a feature of all early galaxy clusters and could provide important insights into the formation of galaxies.

Appreciating the Classical Elegance of Time Crystals

Time crystals are a fascinating class of materials that exhibit quantum phenomena. They are characterized by the presence of time-reversal symmetry, which means that they can exhibit ordered, cyclic behaviors even in the absence of an external driving force.

These materials have been studied for their potential applications in quantum computing and other advanced technologies. The elegance of their behavior is due to the interplay between quantum mechanics and classical physics.
Iran marks World Tourism Day amid plans to boost arrivals

Iran's tourism minister Ali-Khager Monoumane addresses guests during a national ceremony to mark the occasion, the capital of southwesten Sistan-Baluchestan province, September 28, 2019.

The motto of 'Tourism and Jobs: A Better Future for All' not only explains the missions of those who are active in the field of tourism, but also it supports the tasks and approaches of all the executives, decision-makers, legislators, planners, and researchers of futures studies for the largest industry of the world.

Tourism industry promises sustainable development of communities, pledges [more] employment for the youth in rural areas, and it has also the equivalent of all opportunities (for all) to bring peace and happiness to the world.

Saudi Arabia is opening the ultraconservative kingdom to tourists for the first time, easing restrictions for foreign visitors as part of Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman’s initiative to diversify the economy.

Visas had been restricted to Muslim pilgrims and businessmen, but on Friday a new royal decree announced that people from 80 countries will be able to visit Saudi Arabia under a new tourism visa that will allow people to travel for leisure, business, or medical purposes.

The change is part of a broader effort to diversify the kingdom’s historic economy, which depends in part on revenues from sales of oil.

In the past, foreign tourists were allowed to enter Saudi Arabia only on pilgrimage, during the hajj season.

Saudi Arabia is the birthplace of Islam and it is home to two of the world’s most important Muslim pilgrimage sites, Mecca and Medina.

The kingdom’s strategic location on the border of the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf makes it a gateway to the Arab world and a major transit point for travelers to and from Europe, Asia, and Africa.

With more than 70 million people, Saudi Arabia has a young population, with 65% of the country’s population under the age of 30.

Tourism is one of the fastest-growing industries in the region, with the government aiming to attract 30 million tourists by 2030.

The kingdom also has a rich cultural heritage, with a number of archaeological sites and historical monuments.

For tourists who wish to visit Saudi Arabia, the first step is to apply for a tourist visa from the Saudi Arabian consulate in their home country.

Tourists are required to present a valid passport and complete an online application form.

Once the visa is approved, tourists can travel to Saudi Arabia and stay for up to 90 days.

Tourists are also required to have health insurance and comply with the kingdom’s conservative dress codes, which require women to wear abayas and men to wear a thobe.

Tourists are prohibited from engaging in activities that are considered offensive to Islam, such as alcohol consumption and gambling.

Despite these restrictions, Saudi Arabia is a popular destination for business travel, with many international organizations and companies having a presence in the kingdom.

Saudia Arabia, the national airline of Saudi Arabia, is one of the largest airlines in the world and it is a major player in the kingdom’s tourism industry.

In 2018, Saudia announced a partnership with the Tourism Development Fund to invest $300 million in the development of tourism projects in the kingdom.

The partnership is aimed at promoting Saudi Arabia as a destination for business and leisure travel, and it is expected to create thousands of jobs in the tourism sector.

Saudia Arabia is also working on the construction of new airports and the expansion of existing ones, with the aim of accommodating the growing number of tourists expected to visit the kingdom in the coming years.

The government has also announced plans to build a new duty-free zone in the kingdom, which is expected to create thousands of jobs and attract more tourists to Saudi Arabia.

The kingdom’s tourism industry is also benefitting from the growing popularity of Hajj tourism, with the number of pilgrims visiting Mecca doubling in the past five years.

Tourism is one of the fastest-growing industries in the Middle East, with the region attracting millions of tourists each year.

The region’s tourism industry is expected to continue to grow in the coming years, with the government aiming to attract 100 million tourists by 2030.

Israel is the origin of modern terrorism: Mahathir Mohamad

“Friends may break any law and even get away free. Thus, Israel can break all the international laws and norms of the world and not face any consequences,” said Mahathir.

The unfriendly countries can do nothing right. There is no justice in the world,” he added.
