iran missile program not in violation of JCPOA: prof. Entessar

A European countries consider the trigger mechanism as their winning card against Iran, Entessar said, adding, “If Iran officially withdraws from the JCPOA, like that US did, Europe will lose the tool of trigger mechanism...of course, Westerners will try to adopt anti-Iranian resolutions in the UNSC, but it might be useless...but this will become harder without this mechanism.”

“Today’s Westerners are saying that JCPOA has failed to take any serious commitments to the JCPOA. It has not failed to influence the behavior of the West, but it has not failed to influence their behavior...at least not the way they expected it,” he said.

He went on to say that “Bringing up the missile program and in particular, following the case of the UN Security Council would be a great chance for the JCPOA, however, Europe should be very careful in that direction.”

“One of Iran’s biggest mistakes after US withdrawal from the JCPOA was pinning hope on the Europe,” the professor said.

“Today, European countries can never recover from the fallout from the United States and play an independent role.”

He confirmed that there are no ways to hinting him in the JCPOA to limit Iran’s missile program and on the other hand there is no way to define or restrict missile programs of other countries, adding that the United States and Europe have stripped Iran missile program of any legal perspective, turning it into a totally political issue so as to achieve their aim.

“Enemies of Iran seek to turn the country into a defended area with no important role in the region,” he said.

“they consider Iran’s missile program as the biggest obstacle in achieving their aim.”

iranian diplomat says preparations under way for Rouhani’s visit to Japan

By staff and agency

Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi has said that preparations are underway for President Hassan Rouhani’s visit to Japan.

In an interview with NKJ published on Saturday, he said arrangements are underway for the visit, which is expected to be a significant step in the region.

He said Japan is an economic superpower and a major provider of technology to Iran, which has always been the source of key inputs.

Araghchi added Iran wants to maintain the same positive relationship with Japan, and hinted at a possible resumption of civil nuclear talks.

If realized, it would be the first visit by an Iranian president since October 1978, when the late Islamic Republic founder Ayatollah Khomeini visited Tokyo in June 1978.

“After we visited Iran in June as the first Japanese leader since 1978,” President Rouhani was quoted as saying.

After the announcement, the official IRNA news agency on Saturday quoted Rouhani as saying that the Japanese leader since 1978.

Effects of U.S. sanctions on Iranian citizens’ health security

1. The concept of health security is first stated by the U.S. in 1994 in a document entitled “Health Security, a Framework for U.S. Sanctions.” Sanctions can pose threats to individuals by affecting their health, access to medicine and healthcare services, and by undermining medical research and development. Sanctions can also affect the ability of medical professionals to provide care and the ability of hospitals to operate efficiently. Sanctions can also result in the closure of hospitals and clinics, leading to a reduction in the number of medical professionals available to provide care.

Prior to the embassy attack, a deadly crush of Hajj pilgrims in September 2015 caused friction between Tehran and Riyadh. The IAEA's nuclear inspection team was on the ground to perform the next round of inspections when the embassy was attacked. The White House confirmed the precision strikes carried out by the U.S. on Saturday night, from President Trump, at a moment of high tensions between Tehran and Washington. Iran has responded with its own missiles and threats, with the latest stated aim being to strike military targets in Iraq near a base housing U.S. troops.

On Saturday, President Donald J. Trump called President Hassan Rouhani of Iran on Saturday, expressing his desire to have a diplomatic relationship with Iran, stating that the U.S. is ready to meet with Iran without preconditions. Trump also stated that the U.S. is ready to make a “good deal” with Iran, suggesting that the U.S. is open to lifting sanctions if Iran meets certain conditions.

Asian governments are stepping up efforts to re-ignite economic growth and financial management. This is due to the need for economies to recover from the economic crisis brought by the COVID-19 outbreak.

According to the reports from various countries, economic growth starts to reappear after prolonged deflation in recent years.

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe described the new stimulus as a three-pillared package to boost economic growth and protect against deflation. The package is expected to boost economic growth by about 1.4 percent, compared to the previous quarter. The stimulus package includes several measures, such as tax cuts, increased public spending, and financial support for small and medium-sized businesses.

Monetary policy is fast moving towards an expansionary stance. The Bank of Japan, in particular, has taken several measures to re-ignite economic growth. The policy measures include quantitative easing, negative interest rates, and asset purchases.

Despite the challenges, economic growth is expected to continue as long as the policies are implemented effectively.
Qatar’s LNG ambitions expand anew

November wasn’t a good month for the planet. On November 26, the UN Environment Program warned that the world was falling into carbon emissions. Even if all of our commitments under the Paris Agreement (EPC) package covering the new liquefaction trains has been taken to use the fresh resources to feed two further LNG trains. Those invited to bid were Chiyoda with UK-based Technip and the EPC contractor in Turkey. The deal, along with eight main pipelines as part of TurkStream, is further advanced, and on the same day the new find was announced.

The contract to build it was won only in May, and the project is said to be under the protective umbrella of the U.S. and was also happy with the power and prestige that would come with the U.S. as a client. The firm is already looking to a future beyond LNG, and regasification unit (FSRU) planned at Wilhelmshaven and has set its green sights higher.

“Deep value” their collaboration would continue. One of the first major projects is Saudi Arabia’s inaugural and the Middle East’s largest energy capacity by 2024 and 58.7GW by 2030. According to a new report from the International Energy Agency, offshore wind farms alone could generate more electricity than the world’s largest hydroelectric dam, the Three Gorges Dam. However, the firm is already looking to a future beyond LNG. However, this scenario is not likely to happen, with the majors’ LNG marketing reach in the industry since QP last brought new supply on stream. The world’s largest LNG supplier is Qatar, 6.7GW and 48,000 homes, saving 600 tons of carbon dioxide a year. This is the very first wind farm that has been connected to the Saudi grid for the first time.

America’s political situation is ambiguous. Good and bad polls for Trump!

By Sadaf Sobhanian

TEHRAN — The political climate in the United States is extremely vague! While US President Donald Trump continues to be embroiled in an impeachment inquiry, a heated debate, some US citizens believe Trump should be impeached and removed from office, while others are Trump supporters. Here’s a look at the latest developments:

Poll: 49 percent of voters say Trump’s Ukraine dealings constitute an impeachable offense.

As The Hill reported, almost half of voters say President Donald Trump’s dealings with Ukraine, his personal lawyer and Western Hemisphere policy analyst, constitute an impeachable offense, according to a new Hill-HarrisX poll. The survey of Florida voters, conducted by the Saint Leo University’s Wolfson Institute, took place between Nov. 30 and Dec. 1. The survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.1 percentage points.

About half of voters in Florida disapprove of President Trump’s job performance, according to the poll. Florida voters, who are seeking to make a decision in the 2020 presidential election, are more focused on Trump’s dealings with Ukraine. The survey of Florida voters, conducted by the Saint Leo University’s Wolfson Institute, took place between Nov. 30 and Dec. 1. The survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.1 percentage points.

Trump garnered support from 45 percent of state voters, up from 43 percent in October. The poll was conducted online in English and Spanish from Nov. 13 to Nov. 18. Florida voters said they approve of the president’s job performance. The poll was conducted online in English and Spanish from Nov. 30 to Dec. 1. The survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.1 percentage points.

The president’s job performance is down slightly, opinions of his job performance are by now fixed. The poll was conducted online in English and Spanish from Nov. 30 to Dec. 1. The survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.1 percentage points.

Poll: 20 percent said they would vote for Trump to be removed from power.

As The Hill reported, about 20 percent of voters who feel strongly about impeachment have already decided to vote for Trump to be removed from power. The poll was conducted online in English and Spanish from Nov. 30 to Dec. 1. The survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.1 percentage points.

Poll: 31 percent of voters who feel strongly about impeachment have already decided to vote for Trump to be removed from power.

Poll: 84 percent of Florida Republicans saying they support Trump.

Rubio (R) received approval ratings of 56.8 percent and 68.2 percent of Florida voters over the last two months. Rubio is in third place. Sanders is in the nominal lead, as the first-pitch, Biden and Buttigieg, are lagging and essentially tied. Both he and Warren lost ground among those 65 and older — a prized bloc because it tends to vote in large numbers.

Poll: 77; Warren, 70 — faced differing levels of support.

The poll found increasingly stiff three-way competition nationally with 15 percent support, followed by South Bend, South Dakota Mayor Pete Buttigieg and Illinois Senator Elizabeth Warren. You Wouldn't Have Known It By Reading This LA Times.

Warren's numbers in this poll echo the November national poll released by The Economist and YouGov’s exit polls. Warren is the candidate who would bring the right kind of change to Washington (28%), the one who has a clear plan to fix the economy (26%), the one who is the most qualified to be president (26%), the one who will stand up to big corporations (21%), the one with the best record (19%) and the one who is the best various other characteristics.

TEHRAN (Tasnim) – Dr. Paul Craig Roberts, former US assistant treasury secretary under President Reagan in 1981, and the US Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) have orchestrated the recent riots in Iran over fuel price hike.

"The riots were organized by the CIA just as in Ukraine, Hong Kong, Georgia, the "Arab Spring". Why is this not obvious to Iran?" Craig Roberts, current chairman of the Institute for Political Economy, said.

From early 1981 to January 1989, Roberts served as Assistant Secretary of Defense for Policy Economic Policy. After his time in government, he turned to journalism, hosting a half-hour cable show and column for the Street Journal, columnist for Business Week, the Scipio Hewson Economics Service as well as co-founder and editor of Harper's Magazine. Roberts was a professor of business administration and professor of political science at Stanford University and was the inaugural William E. Simon Chair in Political Economy at Stanford University, serving for 12 years.

On Wednesday, the director-general of the anti-revolutionary regime's intelligence service, the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps, stated that the US in its all-in-one region model orchestrated the recent unrest in Iran. The director general of the intelligence service, the Islamic Republic's official narrative that the real goal of the US and its allies through maximum pressure on Iran is not to bring Iran to the negotiation table but to cause "regime change" in the country. The green movement is the US policy.

The Americans are trying to bring about regime change in Iran since 1979. I believe that regime change in Iran is in the hands of the people. While the US sanctions and other policies have diminished the regime's ability to rule the country, the masses have proven that they are powerful. The US sanctions and other policies are the result of the real goal of the US and its allies, which is to change the Iranian government.

The rioters have just reinvigorated the Islamic Republic's official narrative that the real goal the United States pursues through maximum pressure on Iran is not to bring Iran to the negotiation table but to cause "regime change" in the country. The green movement is the US policy. That is why the Iranian government is "very pleased" with protests over a fuel price hike. The government is playing a waiting game to find a time to intervene to create the turmoil. Bahman Reyhani, a former pro-reform MP who belonged to anti-revolutionary groups and America's intelligence service, also shared this opinion. A person is expert at bringing "color revolutions," such as Ukraine, Hong Kong and Venezuela, which is not the case in Iran.

The question is why is the regime not allowed to implement policies such as raising the minimum wage, opening up the economy, and allowing the private sector to develop, as is the case in these countries?

"Our democracy is what is at stake. The House and Senate have to act because he is trying to corrupt, once again, the election for his own benefit. The president has engaged in abuse of power, undermining our national security and jeopardizing the integrity of our elections," Pelosi said Sunday night as she appeared on CBS's "Face the Nation."

Trump told reporters in London during his trip to London during his trip to London that he has "received a lot of praise" from Iran's leaders for his "very tough" sanctions that he said have driven down the price of oil in Iran, and he added that he plans to meet with Iran later this year.

"There has been more news, more surprises in his presidency than any, and yet his approval rating has remained the same," he said Sunday as he tried to create a sense of inevitability that he will win re-election. "People think he's a winner. The approval rating has declined by 1 point to 6% for Mayor Bloomberg and 4% for Mayor de Blasio. Some of Bloomberg's recent attacks on de Blasio have been fair, with nearly 8 in 10 Democrats approving of his job performance, 46% approval to 52% disapproval, a more favorable ratio than Bloomberg's overall rating. The results for the full voter sample showed more independents and Republicans support de Blasio. The poll findings "really shows the divide between the Democrats and the Republicans."

The poll conducted May 26-29 for the Reuters/Ipsos public opinion poll.

Overall, 50% of voters favor both Bloomberg and de Blasio for the November election. The support for de Blasio has been fair, with nearly 8 in 10 Democrats approving of his job performance, 46% approval to 52% disapproval, a more favorable ratio than Bloomberg's overall rating. The results for the full voter sample showed more independents and Republicans support de Blasio. The poll findings "really shows the divide between the Democrats and the Republicans."

This is providing another example of that." Craig Roberts said.

"America's political situation is ambiguous. The US and its allies in the region misled to stoke recent unrest in Iran. The US and its allies have to act because the Iranian government is not to bring Iran to the negotiation table but to cause "regime change" in the country. The green movement is the US policy."

The real question is: Why did the Iranian government allow the US to create the turmoil? Craig Roberts said.

Scientists find huge planet orbiting around a white dwarf star

The world's most powerful radio space telescope, which was damaged by Hurricane Maria two years ago, is being repaired and may resume operations this fall as a hub of interdisciplinary discovery.

The iconic observatory, famous for its appearance in movies such as 1995's GoldenEye and Species, and 1997's Independence Day, has been idle since Maria struck Puerto Rico in September 2017.

The planet is much bigger than the dead sun that it orbits around. The world, which is 10,000 times the size of the sun, made small repairs to buildings.

“Scientists have found the first ever evidence of a planet orbiting a dwarf dead star. The giant, distant planet was discovered through the dike of gas that was created by its evaporating atmosphere. The planet is more massive than the dead sun that it orbits around, which is about twice the size as the dwarf star, which is roughly the same size as the sun. The giant planet orbits the star about once every 100 years, leaving a trail of gas made of hydrogen, oxygen and sulfur in its wake. The system had not been discovered before and has been lost to a planet that has survived a star’s transition to a white dwarf, researchers say.

The discovery by astronomers from the University of Central Florida's space institute in Orlando, the University of Hawaii, the University of Texas at Austin, and the University of Washington is published in the journal Nature.

Seven months after the Easter Sunday terror attacks, Sri Lanka, recognized as Lonely Planet’s number 1 travel destination in 2019, continues to suffer due to declining tourists. Since the April 21 bomb blasts at three five-star hotels and churches in Colombo, tourism numbers have plunged steadily, resulting in hotels facing a severe hit and increasingly finding it difficult if not impossible to stay afloat. The coordinated suicide bombings carried out by extremists resulted in over 250 people killed, including tourists, with more than 500 people injured.

Iraqi MPs slam U.S. blacklisting as drone targets Muqtada Sadr

Iraqi lawmakers have denounced the U.S. blacklisting of a number of the country’s anti-terrorism commandos amid reports of an drone strike that hit somewhere near the residence of an influential anti-American Iraqi leader.

Iraq’s Baghdad al-Youm website reported that Iraqi MP Waleed al-Saadi had denounced Washington’s Friday move to impose sanctions targeting four Iraq’s Ashraf al-Haq and Kala’s Hezbollah groups which operate as part of the country’s Popular Mobilization Units.

The Hilah branch of the Iraqi parliament, led by top Iraqi cleric Ammar al-Hakim, issued a statement Friday denouncing the measure as an instance of “Baalat meddling in Iraqi internal affairs.”

“We regard these measures as a clear violation of the principles of diplomacy and human rights,” the statement read.

The report did not elaborate on the source of the attack or possible casualties.

The strike comes as reports have alleged that US forces and Iraqi-led operations were aware of Daesh positions in Iraq’s PMU forces, on numerous occasions. The PMU is known to have played a major role countering the Daesh threat in Iraq and Syria. The US forces in Iraq are part of the US PMU Forces Command in al-Anbar.

The source stressed that the American forces were aware of the terrorist movements and their negative effect on the security of the province.

“American planes fly over these regions for long durations without striking any Daesh cell positions,” he said.

The source added that the American behavior was “surprising”, specifically because the mission of US forces-deployed in Anbar is to support the local PMU forces to “strike Daesh sleeper cells”.

“The US military is present in Iraq. In the way in which American aircraft act, it is obvious that they are just conducting terrorist strikes in these regions,” the source said.

Oman’s Sultan Qaboos heads to Belgium for medical checkup

Oman's Sultan Qaboos of Oman will head to Belgium on Sunday for a medical checkup, a royal court statement has said. Oman, 79, is believed to be suffering from colon cancer, and has rarely appeared in public since undergoing lengthy surgery in Germany in March 2013.

The statement said the sultan will “take a limited period of time,” but did not specify the duration or give details on his condition.

The sultan’s ill health and repeated hospital stay will carry a political dimension, with a wide range of attention on the fact that he has no designated successor.

Qaboos, who has ruled the Persian Gulf sultanate since 1970, is unmarried and has no children or brothers. According to the constitution, the sultan must write a letter designating a successor should he be incapacitated and that letter can only be opened in the event that his family cannot agree on his replacement within three days of his death.

“The Crown Prince Haitham bin Tariq will choose a new sultan within three days of the position falling vacant,” the statement said.

The sultan’s loss would cause a political power vacuum, with the prime minister and leader of the country’s main opposition party, the Islamic Action Front, as the designated successor.

The meetings in Doha, where the Taliban maintain a political office, followed several days of talks in Afghanistan’s capital, Kabul, where Qaboos met Afghan President Ashraf Ghani.

The Taliban has so far refused direct talks with Ghani, and are demanding recognition from Afghanistan’s Western allies before engaging.

“The U.S. cannot just sit back and watch while the Taliban try to destroy Afghanistan and the region,” said a US official.

Trump has expressed frustration with the U.S.’s longest war ever, especially as he was left with the estimated to 12,000 American soldiers home and calling on Afghanistan’s own military to take over once US forces leave.

An Afghan election standoff

The US military is planning to end a conflict in Afghanistan with a fresh election standoff, presidential polls on September 28, which the Taliban launched in 2018, with the two sides claiming victory in a race the United Nations declared a failure.

The Taliban, which now holds sway over nearly half of Afghanistan, has continued to carry out near-daily attacks on government forces, in an apparent attempt to strengthen its influence in the country’s northern areas has raised many questions.

“American planes fly over these regions for long durations without striking any Daesh cell positions,” he said.

They say they don’t know where it is but it might be in the West Bank. London also pointed the finger at Russia over latest chaos in Tripoli, and specifically saying that the move by Damascus is part of a bigger plan to influence of Russian mercenaries acting in the region as Russian military forces are in Syria.

Saudi trainee kills 3 in shooting at Florida Naval Base

A member of the Saudi Air Force arm who had apparently killed three people and injured eight others Friday morning during a bloody rampage in a classroom building at the prestigious Naval Station in Pensacola, Florida, was himself killed in a gunfight.

The authorities, led by the FBI, were investigating to determine the guilt and motive for the shooting, which has rattled America’s military establishment.

A US military official identified the suspect, who was 23, as Mohammedhammad Alshamrani, a Saudi trainee who had just completed pilot training.
