Iran designs AVC system for hydroelectric power plants

TEHRAN – Iranian experts and engineers have indemnified the knowledge for designing an automatic voltage control (AVC) system, which is high-technology equipment used in hydroelectric power plants. IRNA reported.

This is the former power plant equipment that has been completely designed by Iranian specialists and will be used in hydroelectric power plants after final approval, a deputy with Iran Water and Power Resources Development Company (PWPCO) said.

“Hydroelectric power plants have several major components with high technology. Those who support, are, finances, and broadcasting ministry. The Hindu mobs.

The tourism and a look at the principle of continuity of public services

By Seyyed-Ehsan Rezaei-Nejad

Professor in public law

TEHRAN – One of the basic concepts related to public administration theory is the principles of public service. The principles determine the executive framework and the ways in which public administrative theory enters into force. Because of their importance in social life, “public services” adhere to which principles that are the foundations of administrative law, justify and legitimize many rules and regulations of administrative law.

These principles are: equality, compatibility, continuity, adaptability, precedence and free public services.

Since public service activities are essential to the development of social interdependence and have a nature that can rarely be fully realized without the intervention of government. In this regard, it is still a fundamental theory of modern public law and remains the spirit of modern administrative law. One of the most important principles of public services is continuity. Principle of continuity of public services cannot be discontinued due to the necessity of a constant response to public demands. This principle places a burden on public and administrative authorities, whereby the continuity of public services must be properly guaranteed. This principle originates from the necessity of community administration and of great importance in matters such as security, health care, and so on.

Characteristics and implications of the principle of continuity of public services have been stated that services must be provided in continuity and constantly and especially in cases where services are relevant to the general public and the daily needs of the public. The definition of services must be provided on a continuous basis. Any interruption in public service’s load can lead to civil and political unrest and disturb the peace of people’s lives.

Damascus won’t let Ankara split any Syrian territory in embattled Idlib province

Syria’s Ambassador to the United Nations Bashar al-Jaafari says the Damascus government and the Syrian nation will not allow Turkey to split and annex any part of the Arab country’s embattled northwestern province of Idlib.

“I am confident that Syrian leadership besides Syrian people will not allow Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan or anyone else to repeat in Idlib what happened in Aleppo,” Jaafari said in an exclusive interview with the Arabic-language online newspaper, El Shafak, on Thursday.

"India must prevent killing of Muslims to avoid isolation in Muslim world"

Leader of the Islamic Revolution Ayatollah Seyyed Ali Khamenei on Saturday, March 7th, 2020 said that the time has come for the world to take action against the reign of terror in India, which has intensified the killing of Muslims in that country, and that the world community cannot look the other way in the face of the massacre of Muslims in India. Khamenei noted that the world community has always taken action against the reign of terror in other countries, but it has not done so against the reign of terror in India, which has killed a large number of Muslims in recent years.

Khamenei said that the world community has a moral and legal duty to take action against the reign of terror in India. He said that the world community cannot remain silent in the face of the killing of millions of Muslims in India. Khamenei noted that the world community has always taken action against the reign of terror in other countries, but it has not done so against the reign of terror in India.

Trade Arrangement (SHTA). The arrangement has been in the works since U.S. President Donald Trump reimposed sanctions in 2018 after withdrawing from a deal over Iran's nuclear program.

The SHTA aims to ensure Swiss-based exporters and trading firms in the medical, pharmaceutical and food sectors have a secure channel with a Swiss bank to guarantee payments for exports to Iran. The arrangement has been in place since the U.S. President Donald Trump reimposed sanctions in 2018 after withdrawing from a deal over Iran's nuclear program.

Iranian officials have lamented that despite U.S. officials' claims, sanctions on imports of pharmaceuticals and medical equipment to Iran have not been suspended and the U.S. is still imposing sanctions on both the Iranian medical and medical equipment industry, which has already been hit by international sanctions imposed since the U.S. withdrawal from the nuclear accord in 2018.

On March 4, the government of Iran reported an outbreak of the COVID-19 epidemic, which has already overwhelmed the health care system. The SHTA has been put in place to ensure that humanitarian aid can continue to be delivered to people in need in Iran.
Hojjat noted that the equipment is planned to be officially put into operation in the first half of the upcoming Iranian calendar year which begins on March 21. The official put the costs of the production of this equipment to the related companies.

China's exports fell by double digits in January as anti-virus controls closed businesses, especially in services, and industrial output shrank in a smaller margin.

China's global trade balance fell by 8.7% in January, a bigger drop for the first two months of the year, as coronavirus disruptions to manufacturing and consumer spending hit exports, which fell 18.6% year-on-year, versus the 8.9% decline economists had expected.

China's imports dropped 20.5% in January, which was also smaller than forecasts of a 20.6% fall, as lower global demand and trade disruptions across Asia hit oil and internet goods.

China's trade surplus narrowed to 128.4 billion yuan ($18.4 billion) in January from the year before, when it was 169.2 billion yuan in January 2019, data from the General Administration of Customs showed.

China's exports of goods sank 18.1% year-on-year to 794.6 billion yuan ($116.9 billion) last month, in what is typically the first month of the year, as factories were still closed.

China has been hit with a trade war by the United States since last June and its exports to the United States fell 25.6% in January, jumping to 22.1% for the first two months of the year, as Washington slapped duties on Chinese goods.

China's imports fell 20.5% year-on-year to 666.2 billion yuan, 15.5% more than expected, as global economic growth slowed further last year and the coronavirus hit economic activity.

China's imports of goods fell 19.5% in January, which was smaller than the expected 21.9% decline, as demand abroad from the world's second-biggest economy fell sharply as authorities closed businesses and travel during the January 23-31 holiday period.

Chinese officials said they were keeping a close eye on developments in the United States and that they would wait to see how the U.S. government responds to their continued efforts to resolve trade disputes.

Chinese officials also said they were watching the situation in Japan and were closely watching the U.S. president's visit to the country.

China's seafood products were hit by the U.S. boycott, which was lifted in the fall of last year.

China's seafood products are still facing challenges due to the continued boycott, which has lifted slightly this year.

The new shipping figures reflect this emphasis on fossil fuel production. According to the Norwegian Shipowners’ Association, the country experienced a 10% increase in vessel traffic in 2019 compared to 2018, with 30 million tons of cargo crossing the Arctic Sea Route. This represents a significant rise in Arctic shipping activity and underscores the growing importance of the Arctic as a transportation corridor.

However, the surge in Arctic shipping is also raising concerns about the environmental impact of increased shipping in the region. The Norwegian government has acknowledged that the shipping sector is a significant contributor to greenhouse gas emissions and has called for increased efforts to reduce carbon footprints. The government has also initiated a national Arctic strategy, which sets forth a series of goals and actions to promote sustainable development in the region while minimizing environmental risks.

In conclusion, the current shipping figures in the Arctic illustrate the growing importance of the region as a transportation corridor and highlight the need for continued efforts to manage the environmental impacts of increased shipping activity. As the Arctic Sea Route continues to develop, it is crucial that these efforts are prioritized to ensure a sustainable and environmentally responsible future for the region.

Leader issues statement urging India to stop attacks on Muslims

The policies of the Trump Administration and its minions and supporters towards alleged "enemies" (including other sovereign nations like Cuba and Venezuela) etc, must ultimately be cutting a special place in hell for the near future. - Leader

However, it may also be the case that more prudence is needed in the meantime, otherwise the West may become even harder for the Trump gangsters to rationalize its ugly sanctions especially at a time when there is a strong need for a foreign policy reset (yet again). One observer has pointed out, for example, that the US has long been more than hard on allies who have been part of the "axis of evil" and that now America will be finding that "stock market" is growing downwards and that there are no longer any plans for American troops to be used in Iraq.

In any event, in the U.S., the status quo is falling apart and not just because of the Covid-19 threat (which is accelerating exponentially in the U.S., too). For one thing, Trump has been forced to "eat crow" because the economy is on the verge of what may become the worst recession ever, and his beloved "stock market" is gyrating downwards and sideways. Even in Spain and France, where some claims he has made that the U.S. economy has ever been really healthy since the recession of 2008 and 2009, the deepest depression since the Depression of the 1930s. Since 2009 the Federal Reserve Bank has engineered a debt fueled binge and flat money printing the likes of which has not before been seen anywhere and which has been bound to exacerbate in time U.S. pretensions of economic health and leadership.

What a change! It is unlikely Trump can enjoy a second term in the White House, and this is a big, it is a disaster for the West and for the West in particular for the people.

The spectacular and long-lost ancient Greek city of Thouria

The ancient Greek city of Thouria, located in the southern Peloponnese region of ancient Greece, was once a major city and became the center of an ancient civilization. Through the excavations at Thouria, archaeologists have learned about the city’s history and its cultural significance.

One of the most significant discoveries at Thouria was the archaeological site of the ancient theater. The theater, which dates back to the 4th century BC, is one of the most important examples of Greek theatre architecture. It was used for public performances and was a focal point of cultural life in ancient Greece.

Another important discovery at Thouria was the remains of the ancient market, which was located near the theater. The market was a center of commerce and trade, and it has provided valuable insights into the economic life of ancient Thouria.

The excavations at Thouria have also revealed evidence of the city’s political and military history. The remains of a large fortress and a defensive wall indicate that Thouria was a fortified city, and it likely played a role in the political and military struggles of ancient Greece.

Archaeological findings from Thouria have added much more information to what we already knew about this ancient Greek city. The excavations at Thouria continue to provide new insights into the history and culture of ancient Greece, and they are important for our understanding of the development of the ancient world.

Iran limits intercity travel to prevent coronavirus spread

The growing death toll has sparked widespread travel restrictions, forcing Iran to cancel all domestic and international flights, including flights to and from the capital Tehran, as well as the country’s famous tourist sites.

The number of coronavirus cases in the country has reportedly doubled in recent days, with 20 people confirmed to have the virus in the capital Tehran alone. The government has warned against all non-essential travel and has advised citizens to stay home wherever possible.

Local businesses have been affected, with restaurants, cafes, and bars all closed in an effort to prevent the spread of the virus. The government has also advised people to wear face masks in public and to practice social distancing.

The Iranian government has been criticized for its slow response to the crisis, with many people complaining that the government has not done enough to contain the outbreak. However, the country’s health officials have praised the efforts of the Iranian people in following the guidelines and in limiting their movements.

The situation is likely to worsen in the coming weeks, with experts warning that the virus could spread rapidly in the densely populated areas of Iran. The government has urged people to stay alert and to take all necessary precautions to prevent the spread of the virus.

The government has also advised people to avoid large gatherings and to practice social distancing, with people being encouraged to stay home when possible.

Iraqi citizens brace for life under water due to power outages across the country

The Ministry of Health is preparing to launch a home-to-home program on Tuesday aimed at providing medical supplies, food and medicine to those affected by COVID-19 across the country. The announcement comes after health authorities called for the implementation of a national campaign to combat the spread of the virus.

Why don’t we panic about climate change like we do coronavirus?

Despite the global pandemic, the world is still knee-deep in the climate crisis, which is causing more heat, more droughts, and more food prices. This is not news, but it is news that we are not paying enough attention to. The world needs to act quickly to reduce our emissions and limit the impacts of the climate crisis, or else we will face a future of increased wildfires, extreme weather events, and more deaths.

Air pollution shortens life expectancy by nearly three years: study

Air pollution causes harm to people’s health, but we often don’t think about it in the same way as we do about climate change. A new study has found that air pollution shortens life expectancy by nearly three years. This is a major concern, and we need to do more to reduce air pollution in order to protect people’s health.

Meanwhile, the Middle East Eye news outlet reported that moments after the identical results, bin Salman had ordered the prince to be put under arrest.

The detention came on the heels of a report by The Washington Post that Prince Mohammad bin Nayef had been placed by bin Salman in 2015 in a secure facility under house arrest and prevented from leaving the kingdom.

Fighting needs to stop now. Military adventurism and the escalation of violence will not bring peace, the president said. “We have made important political and security steps that had raised hopes for a more stable and secure place for all Yemenis,” the president said. “But efforts to resume a political process appear to be unraveling.”

AFC World Cup qualifiers face postponement

TAREQ - FIFA and the Asian Football Confederation (AFC) met at the Home of FIFA to discuss football activities in Asia and considered to postpone upcoming World Cup qualifiers over the novel coronavirus.

For both FIFA and the AFC, the well-being and health of all individuals involved in football matches remains the highest priority, and as such, a formal proposal to postpone upcoming matches in the Asian FIFA World Cup 2022 and AFC Asian Cup 2023 qualifiers will now be shared with the relevant member associations,” the FIFA statement said.

“AFC and the FIFA will provide an update on these features in the coming days following consultation with the AFC member associations.”

Justice rules Ronaldo must remain in Paraguayan jail

AROUNDON (Reuters) – Former Brazilian international Ronaldo da Silva was again ordered to remain in jail in Paraguay on Saturday after a judge ruled him a flight risk.

The 40-year-old was arrested on Friday for attempting to enter Paraguay with a false passport two days earlier and was ordered to be held in police custody along with his brother and businessman Roberto Amorin.

The pair was to be released into house arrest but was rejected by the judge, who also dismissed Asia’s claims to a bungled immigration case he shared in court.

Judge Clara Ruiz Diaz said their alleged offence was a “serious international crime”.

Because the pair was foundflight risk they must remain in custody, she added. Under Paraguayan law, officials now have six months to complete their investigation but Ronaldo’s lawyers, who called the decision “incredible”, are expected to appeal in the coming days.

Paraguayan television showed the two men arriving to Paraguay by a local casino on Saturday after a judge ruled him a flight risk.

The match has been scheduled for March 26 at the Azadi Stadium, however football activities in Asia will likely be postponed due to novel coronavirus fears.

The AFC and FIFA have been receiving confirmation from the Asian Football Confederation on new arrangements, but chairman Pekka Kuun-Kay said it made sense to postpone the qualifiers to later in the year.

“We can travel to the Asian zone for the matches as the government has already announced Hong Kong citizens would need to be in isolation for 14 days after returning, which is not possible for any professional player,” he said. “In fact, it’s difficult to identify a neutral ground to play these days because many countries in the region have travel bans.”

The Sun director Majidi warns about higher risk of coronavirus for child laborers

Majid Majidi, the director of “The Sun,” a drama about child labor in Tehran, has warned of the higher risk of contracting coronavirus disease for child laborers in Iran.

In a statement published on Saturday, Majidi described his meeting with Ahmad and Kauar, two children who gather paper, glass, and other materials from the waste bins in Tehran for recycling to make a living.

“They asked the elder brother to come out of the trash can and told him he would get sick this way but he refused and continued to work with his brother. Consequently, they tried to change the atmosphere and become friends with the elder one,” he added.

“Now that there is a bad disease (coronavirus) it is very dangerous. The two began to laugh and the little boy said with a smile, ‘my brother says to ourselves we are coronavirus,’” he wrote.

The two then explained that they used to sell items in metro stations or at intersections or even in the streets after work but after the new virus outbreak, people don’t buy things from them anymore, and even try to wash them to ‘wash out’ the virus.

“Now, with the spread of coronavirus, the children are worried about this disease, and they want to go back to the trash can to gather pieces of paper and plastic, and put them in a large sack, so that they can be disposed of later,” Majidi said.

“They said that you are not alone. Many children have lost their jobs and are forced to search inside the trash cans,” he noted.

Majidi asked the officials and the people to form campaigns to support those children and keep them safe until this new virus abates.

A scene from director Parvin Tajvid’s short animation “The Dog That Was Sick” wins award at Canterbury Anifest

TEHRAN — Iranian filmmaker Parvin Tajvid won a prize in this category.

“The Dog That Was Sick” tells the story of a dog that gets sick because it eats whatever it finds. When the dog eats out of the trash can, the dog eats them all. And now he seems to be losing his sense of taste, and he is actually locked in the capsule of a spacecraft.

The short animated movie is about an Iranian deaf girl, who is a child, dreamed of flying and being free. And now he seems to be losing his sense of taste, and he is actually locked in the capsule of the spacecraft. Currently, plastic and metal have created impressive moments, which have been recorded by our cameras,” Yaqmuni said.

“The shorts try to give hope and portray better moments that we have witnessed in the hospital,” he added.

“We believe these short documentaries will keep the atmosphere and become friends with the elder one,” he added.
