Iran-EAEU trade exceeds $1.2bn in 11 months

TEHERAN — The value of trade between Iran and Eurasian Economic Union (EAEU) member states reached $1.242 billion during the first eleven months of the current Iranian calendar year (March 21, 2020-February 19, 2021), according to the spokesman of Islamic Republic of Iran Customs Administration (IRICA).

Roshdiollah Latifi said the figure shows 19 percent growth from $1.02 billion in the same period of the previous year.

The official further appreciated the robust and positive trade exchange between the two sides, especially under the sanctions condition.

Ban on Iran flights to go down in history as disgraceful: envoy

(Tehran Times) — Iran’s ambassador to France Behrouz Qasemi has lambasted numerous new travel orders to contain coronavirus in the wake of inter-Afghan state which will be formed following an agreement in the wake of peace negotiations in Sweden in the same time period in the past year, saying they are a historic disgrace.

The envoy said it was a historic disgrace that a few countries that have not lifted economic and security sanctions against Iran are imposing restrictions on Iranian flights into the countries, adding it was a move to cover up for their down history in showing that Iran is starting a serious epidemic almost on its own.

Qasemi went on the Twitter account of the Iranian Embassy in France that instead of helping Iran, certain governments in Europe have decided to follow the United States’ stance and pile more pressure on Iran.

Qasemi said, “The envoys of some countries have been trampling on human rights, usurping the country’s air space, and violating rights of the Iranian people in many cases.

SAUDI COALITION VIOLATES STOCKHOLM ACCORD

Saudis’ price war or a Russian plot against U.S. shale?— IEA

In early morning of Monday, the announcement was made by Saudi Arabia that it would reduce crude oil prices by $2 per barrel compared to its production level last week, which led to oil prices falling.

Brent crude futures fell to nearly $40 on early Monday, cutting the latest increase. However, theoil market recovered slightly on Tuesday.

The move by the Saudis is a shock to the world oil market, as it is seen as a trigger of a price war between the two majors.

Some analysts believe that the Saudi Arabia’s move is an attempt to bring down the prices of oil as a way to compete with Russia, which has been increasing its production.

However, others argue that the move by the Saudis is a strategy to reduce the imbalance in the market and prevent a potential oversupply that could lead to a decrease in prices.

The move is also seen as a way for Saudi Arabia to maintain its market share and prevent Russia from gaining an advantage.

Despite the recent shock, some analysts believe that the move by the Saudis is unsustainable and will not lead to a significant decrease in prices.

Meanwhile, others argue that the move by the Saudis is a sign of weakness and could lead to further instability in the oil market.
Iranian Justice Ministry condemns anti-Muslim violence in India

Assembly of Experts urges India to prevent Hindu extremists to fan flames of division in the country

Iranian Minister for Human Rights and International Affairs issued a statement on Tuesday, the anti-Muslim crater in India. The statement condemned anti-Muslim practices and violence in India and called for the respect of human rights and equality for all citizens, regardless of their religious beliefs.

The statement expressed concern over the recent incidents of violence against Muslims in India and highlighted the importance of promoting tolerance and respect for diversity. It emphasized the need to protect the rights of religious minorities and to prevent any form of discrimination based on religion.

The statement called on the Indian government to take immediate action to stop the violence and ensure the safety and security of all citizens. It also urged the international community to play a role in addressing this issue and to support the efforts of the Assembly of Experts.

The statement concluded by expressing solidarity with the victims of the violence and reaffirming the Assembly of Experts' commitment to upholding human rights and promoting peace and understanding in the region.

Asian shares emerge from rout as stimulus hopes calm panic

Asian stocks bounced, and bond yields rose from record lows on Tuesday on hopes that global policymakers would introduce more stimulus to cushion the onset of a coronavirus outbreak.

Japan’s Nikkei ended the day up 0.85%, after touching its lowest level since Feb. 10, and European stocks were expected to follow the Asian lead with major stock futures trading up more than 2%.

In early Asian trade, the pan-Europe Euro Stoxx 50 futures were up 3.3% and S&P 500 e-minis were up 3.32% at 2,842.

In futures markets, the S&P 500 index was up 3.43% at 2,842.65.

Futures on the Dow Jones Industrial Average were trading almost 1% higher.

“Although the market rally on Tuesday lacked a major catalyst, the streamlining of stimulus measures is providing some support,” said Omer Esen, senior economist at TD Securities, in a note to clients.

Chinese leaders used to worry about when economic growth decelerates to such an extent that it might be perceived to avoid job losses and social unrest. Now, they are worried about the first quarter of zero or negative growth since the chaos of Mao Zedong’s cultural revolution, the Chinese government is taking a more pro-active approach to stop society from getting bored and anxious. The government now has a stronger sense of security and responsibility, and its comprehensive national exhibit several winning over 25 points in enforcing its presence amongst the most successful international cities. It is recognized as a major asset to the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) countries. That is why Beijing is working hard to achieve its goals before the year is over, the main goal for many international organizations to target.

The gain in the US and European futures came on the back of a 0.3% rise in MSCI’s broadest index of Asia-Pacific shares outside Japan, Europe and Emerging Markets were expected to follow the Asian lead with major stock futures trading up more than 2%.

President Xi Jinping doubled down on when he made his comments about the situation in the first quarter when more than 1bn people were under quarantine measures outside Hubei province.

The district is home to some of the largest steel producer in China, which had suspended production during the outbreak. The region’s first major enterprise was the former China Steel Corp, which was nationwide. In a short-term downturn, capital expenditures are expected to be hit hard, and some smaller businesses may face bankruptcy.

Supporting the mood was a pledge from President Donald Trump on Monday to “take big steps” to protect the economy and the market and this union has laid the ground for the future of the trade deal.

Mr. Qin is now trying to renew the loan, a step that could result in some unintended consequences. The S&P 500 index was up 3.43% at 2,842.65, while the Dow Jones Industrial Average was up 3.1%.

In fact, very high volatility in equities is the premise for the running costs of the vaccine: on average, 10-12% of the total cost affects equities, depending on whether the market is bullish or bearish. Trump’s administration has been pushing for low-interest rates, which is a huge gamble that on Tuesday President Xi Jinping redoubled in the face of the first visit to the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) countries. The best way to do this is by selling a very small portion of the steel to other countries.

The most important thing for China is to continue financial support to provide financial support to Iranian private sector, which means extending loans to smaller businesses or additional support from state-owned banks. China has announced investments worth Rmb25tn, about $3.6tn, in new infrastructure projects.

On March 1, China’s central bank and financial supervisory bodies announced a new set of measures to support small and medium-sized enterprises, which would allow them to apply for loans and extend the term of some debt. The central bank also relaxed some capital adequacy requirements for banks.

Oil jumps after rout on stimulus hopes but price war weighs

Energy companies feel the pain of Saudi Arabia’s price war

From the shale fields of Texas to deepwater projects in the North Sea, Saudi Arabia’s crude oil price war is leaving big global oil companies, some of which have spent years building up reserves and working capital to hedge against the volatility of oil prices, counting how much they have to lose as the conflict rages on.

The resulting price collapse has forced some oil majors to slashing dividends, cutting their capital spending budgets and shelving plans to build new refineries or petrochemical plants.

On Thursday, Royal Dutch Shell, Europe’s largest oil company, said it would cut its capital spending by 30%, or $1 to $2 billion, a blow to its $38 billion plan to invest in new facilities over five years.

In the same week, ExxonMobil, the world’s largest oil company, said it would cut its capital spending by 40%, or $8 billion, from a record $27 billion in 2019.

The price war between Saudi Arabia and Russia has sent oil prices plunging to levels not seen since 2016, when crude oil fell below $30 a barrel due to oversupply in the market.

Saudi Arabia and Russia have been engaged in a price war for months, with both countries increasing their oil production to drive down prices and force their competitors out of the market.

The price war has also led to a sharp decline in oil prices, with Brent crude oil futures falling below $40 a barrel on Monday, the lowest level since 2016.

Oil prices fell around $20 a barrel on Monday, as investors continued to worry about the economic impact of the coronavirus pandemic on oil demand.

“Oil prices are falling because of concerns about the economic impact of the coronavirus,” said Kim Forrest, an oil analyst at Troubleshooting Finance, a financial services firm.

“Investors are worried about the impact of the virus on oil demand, which has been slowing as the pandemic continues to spread around the world,” Forrest said.

However, some analysts believe that oil prices could soon rise if the coronavirus outbreak is contained and economic activity begins to pick up.

“Once the coronavirus outbreak is under control, we expect oil prices to recover,” said David O’Malley, an oil strategy analyst at Capital Economics.

“Economic recovery will be key to the recovery of oil prices, as demand is expected to rise once the pandemic is over,” O’Malley said.

The combination of reduced demand and increased supply has led to a glut of oil in the market, which is driving prices lower.

“Oil prices are expected to continue to decline until the supply and demand balance improves,” said Forrest.

The price war between Saudi Arabia and Russia is expected to continue, with both countries showing no signs of backing down.

Saudi Arabia has increased its oil production to 12 million barrels per day (bpd), while Russia has increased its production to 11.7 million bpd.

The price war has led to a significant decline in oil prices, with Brent crude oil futures falling below $40 a barrel on Monday, the lowest level since 2016.

The assassination of Gen. Qassem Suleimani has triggered a surge of regional tensions. Iran has vowed to avenge his death, and Saudi Arabia has increased its military readiness. The Houthis in Yemen have also responded by launching attacks on Saudi Arabia. The situation in the region is highly volatile, with the risk of a wider conflict increasing.

Resurgence of violence as Saudi-Yemen talks collapse

Yemeni civilians continue to suffer a wave of violence as both parties refuse to halt the conflict. Saudi Arabia and Iran's proxy groups, the Houthis, have engaged in a series of fierce battles, with the Houthis making gains in several areas.

Political exploitation of the coronavirus by Saudi media against Iran

TEHRAN — The coronavirus pandemic has provided an opportunity for Saudi media outlets to exploit the situation against Iran, using the crisis to spread propaganda and sow discord.

The United Nations has been trying to mediate between the parties in Yemen, but the efforts have not been successful. The Houthis and their allies have continued to attack targets in Saudi Arabia, prompting the Saudi-led coalition to intensify its air strikes.

In response to the escalating tensions, the U.S. and its allies have increased their diplomatic efforts to de-escalate the situation. The U.S. has repeatedly called for a political solution to the conflict, but the Houthis and their allies have rejected such proposals.

Meanwhile, the Houthis have reinforced their positions on the ground, and the Saudi-led coalition has responded with increasing air strikes. The situation remains highly volatile, with the risk of a wider conflict increasing.

Baghdad's negative response to Washington, relations with Iran to continue

The Taliban have started internal talks in Afghanistan, which could lead to a political solution to the conflict. The United States has been pushing for a settlement, but the Taliban have been resistant to the overtures.

President Biden has recently signed the Afghanistan Reconciliation Act, which provides for the withdrawal of U.S. forces from Afghanistan. The Taliban have responded by calling for talks, but the negotiations have been complex and protracted.

As the talks continue, there is growing concern that the situation in Afghanistan could spiral out of control. The United States and its allies will need to remain engaged in the conflict to prevent a wider war from breaking out. The situation in Afghanistan remains highly volatile, with the risk of a wider conflict increasing.
UAE issues flight permit to Iran till March 20

TOPIC

TEHRAN – The United Arab Emirates (UAE) has issued a permit to operate flights to Iran until March 20, 2020, in response to the outbreak of the coronavirus, a UAE embassy in the UAE announced on Tuesday.

The UAE decided to issue a permit to operate flights to Iran in response to concerns over the spread of the coronavirus. The UAE has seen a significant number of cases, with over 200 confirmed infections as of Tuesday.

In a statement, the UAE embassy in the UAE said that the permit will allow flights to operate between the two countries, and that the UAE government will continue to monitor the situation and take necessary measures to ensure the safety of passengers.

The UAE has taken a series of measures to combat the spread of the coronavirus, including suspending entry for travelers from Iran and implementing quarantine measures for passengers arriving from the country. The UAE has also advised its citizens to avoid non-essential travel to Iran and to practice social distancing measures.

Kish Island to close tourist sites during Noruz amid coronavirus outbreak

TOPIC

TEHRAN – Kish Island, a popular tourist destination in the Persian Gulf, has decided to close its tourist sites during the upcoming Noruz holiday in order to prevent the spread of the coronavirus.

Kish Island, which is already popular among local and foreign tourists, has been hit by the coronavirus outbreak, with several cases reported in the region. The island's authorities have taken this decision in order to ensure the safety of visitors and residents alike.

The decision comes after other Persian Gulf states have also taken measures to prevent the spread of the virus, including the closure of public places and the suspension of large gatherings.

Kish Island is a popular tourist destination, with its white sandy beaches, clear waters, and natural beauty attracting visitors from around the world. The island is expected to reopen its tourist sites after the Noruz holiday, subject to further developments in the situation.

How to disinfect your space on an airplane

Major airlines, including Delta Air Lines and American Airlines, say they clean their planes daily, and some at least once halfway through a flight, and that plane cleanliness is a priority. But some travelers are taking extra steps to make sure their airplanes are clean and that their plane is disinfected before boarding, some even when they're not on the plane.

Some airlines have adopted new cleaning protocols, including more frequent cleanings and the use of disinfectants. Some travelers are also taking steps to disinfect their own space on board, such as wiping down their seats, trays, and other surfaces they may come into contact with.

Disinfecting hard surfaces: When you get on your seat and wash your hands, use disinfecting wipes to clean the hard surfaces of the seat like the head and armrest, the seat belt, the remote control, the screen, seatback pocket and the tray table.

Disinfecting soft surfaces: If the seat is soft and nonporous or leather, you can wipe that down too. If the seat is hard and nonporous or leather, you can use disinfecting wipes to clean the surfaces.

Disinfecting disposable items: If you are using disposable items, make sure you dispose of them properly. Do not throw them in the trash bin, as it could be a potential source of contamination.

Disinfecting electronic devices: If you are using electronic devices, make sure you clean them thoroughly after each use. Use disinfecting wipes to clean the screens, keyboards, and other surfaces.

Disinfecting personal items: If you are carrying any personal items, make sure you clean them thoroughly after each use. Use disinfecting wipes to clean the items, such as water bottles, glasses, and other personal belongings.

Disinfecting clothing: If you are wearing any clothing, make sure you clean them thoroughly after each use. Use disinfecting wipes to clean the fabric, such as shirts, trousers, and other clothing items.

Disinfecting luggage: If you are using luggage, make sure you clean it thoroughly after each use. Use disinfecting wipes to clean the luggage, such as suitcases, backpacks, and other luggage items.

Disinfecting other surfaces: If you are using any other surfaces, make sure you clean them thoroughly after each use. Use disinfecting wipes to clean the surfaces, such as tables, door handles, and other surfaces.

Disinfecting personal hygiene items: If you are using any personal hygiene items, make sure you clean them thoroughly after each use. Use disinfecting wipes to clean the items, such as toothbrushes, razors, and other personal hygiene items.

Iran fully prepared to contain coronavirus outbreak: WHO

SOCIETY TEHRAN - Richard Brennan, the Regional Emergency Director of the World Health Organization (WHO) Eastern Mediterranean Region, has said Iran is fully prepared to contain the novel coronavirus (COVID-19).

Brennan, along with a team of experts, visited a hospital in Tehran on Tuesday to ensure that the process of service and control of the virus is running at its highest level, IRNA reported.

He said that the most important pillar for controlling the contagious disease, especially COVID-19, is the strong cooperation between responsible bodies and the public, which features clearly in Iran.

Brennan also stated that Iranians behave in a powerful, effective and efficient manner in managing various crises and can overcome the COVID-19 crisis.

In a press conference in Tehran on Saturday, the WHO official said countries in the region should use Iran’s experience as a role model in handling the novel coronavirus.

“Iran benefits from one of the strongest healthcare systems in the region, Iran has made notable achievements in the field of battling coronavirus.”

The World Health Organization has so far sent an aircraft carrying tons of medical supplies and test kits along with a medical team to Iran in order to help combat the novel coronavirus.

Deputy health minister Kianoush Jahanpour said that at least 8,042 people have so far been infected in the country. Of the total figures, 2,731 have been recovered and 291 have died.

SOCIETY TEHRAN - China has sent the third consignment of medical supplies donated by China to battle COVID-19, IRNA news agency reported on Monday.

The flight carried 1,600 kg of supplies consisting of traditional Chinese medicines, surgery, surgical masks, diagnostic kits and face shields that have been donated by Chinese people.

Medicine worth $90,000 (around $100,000) is included in the items. This medicine is being used to treat coronavirus in China.

China has so far sent 5,000 coronavirus test kits and 250,000 surgical masks.

SOCIETY TEHRAN - Iran has banned export of some anti-protection equipment, textiles and cellulose products as well as non-textile products, as well as spray taps.

Iran will defeat COVID-19, we believe: Chinese envoy

Chinese Ambassador in Iran, Chang Hua, has said he believes that Iran would overcome the crisis of coronavirus outbreak.

“We believe that by sending humanitarian aid, Iran will overcome the crisis,” he said in a meeting with Mahmoud Reza Peyvandi, secretary general of the Iranian Red Crescent Society.

The envoy praised Iran’s Red Crescent Society as the first humanitarian organization affiliated with the Red Cross and the Red Crescent societies which sent humanitarian shipments to Iran.

“China’s Red Crescent Society expresses a powerful, effective and efficient manner in managing various crises and can overcome the COVID-19 crisis.”

SOCIETY TEHRAN - Russia has sent 50,000 COVID-19 diagnostic kits to Iran.

SOCIETY TEHRAN - Russia has sent 50,000 COVID-19 diagnostic kits to the European Commission in Moscow to help the combat COVID-19 outbreak, Russian ambassador to Russia Konstantin Abilov has said.

“The EU leaders are keen to turn in the shortest possible time, he noted, IRNA reported on Tuesday.

Abilov praised Russia’s cooperation with Iran in the fight against the virus, pointing to determination of the authorities to cooperate and to cooperate and to have cooperation and cooperation and cooperation in various fields, especially in the health sector.

Referring to Iran’s wide reach and potential of cooperation, he stated that Iran is able to play a significant role in the world. Iran would have cooperation in the future.

Putin says no need to do away with Presidential term limits

The Russian president has spoken out against a proposal to remove constitutional limits on the number of terms a president can serve.

"The proposal made by [Ukrainian lawmaker] Yevhen Terenkiv to abolish the presidential term limits in Ukraine is considerate," Putin said, speaking to Duma lawmakers on Moscow on Tuesday. "Stability must be the primary condition for any country that has punctured the boundaries of regulatory and rules of power. I consider it inappropriate to move to remove the limitations on the number of presidential terms," Putin added, defending the move that would allow current President Volodymyr Zelensky to become eligible for another term in 2024.

The 85-year-old Putin already holds the record as the longest-serving president in Russian history, serving four terms since 2000. If he continues to hold office until 2024, he could become the longest-serving Russian leader in history.

During Tuesday’s address, Putin stressed that the proposed constitutional amendments were being timed, and added that the country should work together in a consolidated manner amid the national situation emerging in global politics, security, and economics.

He added that he did not believe in the need for such a proposal, and lamented the current situation in Russia.

"Your house, you vote in, as we all see," Putin said. "The Duma approved the proposed amendments in the second reading."

Coronavirus as deadly for Italian football as two World Wars

In 1973 a cholera epidemic which left 300,000 people dead in Naples, did not halt play.

Since 1898, only the dark days of two World Wars had stopped Serie A -- between the first and second World Wars and between 1943 and 1945.

Since its outbreak in China last December, the novel coronavirus has caused more than 4,000 deaths and over 140,000 people worldwide.

At the start of the season, Iran's top-tier league was due to kick off on February 22.

As for the Italian Cup, interrupted after the opening match, might face an unprecedented tournament.

SEOU, (Reuters) – Japan’s travel restrictions on South Korea over the coronavirus epidemic have spurred cancellations of a string of K-pop concerts scheduled in Japan, threatening to hurt the Korean entertainment industry in its most lucrative market.

Japan and South Korea are major trading partners, with the latter accounting for 8% of Japan’s music exports, marking $320.6 million worth of exports in 2017 followed by China and Southeast Asian countries, according to Statistics Korea.

“Entertainment firms and talent agencies will now give up for almost zero concert profits,” said Lee Ki-hun, an analyst at Hana Financial Group. “Not only ticket sales but also advertisement revenues are gone for the time being,” he added.
