Johnson narrowly wins confidence vote as rebellion emerges

The UK Prime Minister Boris Johnson has narrowly survived a vote of confidence by his own Conservative party MPs, but the results show he has suffered a significant rebellion within the ranks of his party.

Johnson needed a simple majority, 180 votes or more, to continue in office. 271 Tory MPs voted in favor of the prime minister, compared to a huge 148 MPs who voted against his leadership.

The majority of just 23 MPs means more than 40 percent of the Conservative party no longer have confidence in their leader.

Despite the prime minister being immune from another leadership challenge for 12 months, the numbers of MPs who voted against Johnson as liability will seek to severely undermine his leadership by opposing any legislation the government tries to pass in parliament.

Experts say it’s difficult to see Johnson staying in his capacity as UK Prime Minister when the country heads to the next general election.

To put the vote into perspective, Johnson has suffered a bigger rebellion than his predecessor Theresa May when she faced a confidence vote in 2019 amid the Brexit impasse.

Despite his leadership severely undermined, Johnson has claimed the “convincing” and “decisive” result means the government can “move on”.

TEHRAN – Cultural Heritage, Tourism, and Handicrafts Minister Ezzatollah Zarghami said on Monday that many Iranian handcrafts have untapped potential for becoming practical.

"We must incorporate handcrafts into everyday life and make them practical," he said.

He made the remarks on Monday during the official induction ceremony of the new deputy for handicrafts for the Islamic Republic. "This is still a matter that is not subject to (the U.S.-imposed) sanctions and can significantly contribute to the robustness of the economy," Zarghami noted.

The handicrafts industry is an outstanding example of an ancient fortified region. This impressive construction undoubtedly represents the climax and is the most important architectural structure of the Achaemenid era (550 -330 BC). Centuries after its construction, it was used for the production of silk and cotton garments. Moreover, it also served as a supplier place in the interaction networks of the Islamic Republic, Germany, the U.S., the UK, and other countries.

The Islamic Republic has recently submitted an inclusive dossier on its handicrafts to the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization. The dossier comprises the obligatory data about a selection of 56 handicrafts, which are located in 24 provinces.

The structure is named after Shah Abbas the Great (1588 – 1629), who ordered the construction of some 10,000 handcrafts across his empire. Caravansary is a compound word combining “caravan” with “sahar”, the former stands for “travelers” while the latter refers to the building.

Iran’s earliest caravansaries were built during the Achaemenid era (550 -330 BC). Centuries later, when Shah Abbas I assumed power from the Safavids, he ordered the building of a network of caravansaries across the country. For many travelers to Iran, staying in an even visiting a centuries-old caravansary can be a world of vast opportunities. Fortunately, there is no need to worry. The caravansaries are still far from what they should be and every related organization needs to get involved to fill this gap, the minister explained.

Mongol-Ill Khan dynasty (1256-1353). Although the conquests of Timur (died 1405) were in most respects devastating to Persia, he favored arts and culture and spared them power to work his great palaces in Samarkand.

Later in the 17th century, there was a growing interest in Persian carpets among the high keyed fresh colors and opulence, they were highly regarded by European Renaissance and Baroque artists. At the end of the 17th century, nomads and town dwellers were still making carpets using dyes developed over centuries, each group maintaining an authentic tradition.

Textiles were translated into Persian by Iranian researcher Tahereh Nej and her students. Two of the most important works were authored by the Iranian scholar Wafa Shams.

The projects are estimated to generate over 40% of the total value of the calendar year 1398. Of the past Iranian calendar year 1399 (March 20, 2020 – February 19, 2021) more than 60% of the total value was earned via suitcase trade with precious and semi-precious goods, with the balance being earned via exports.

The Islamic Republic exported $427 million worth of handicrafts during the first eleven months in comparison to the same period last year, a result due to the impact of the U.S. sanctions and the impact of the ruble crisis in Iran.
